3RD-5TH THE WHY...

Multiday This lesson Informational shows how Texts: discrimination
Marian has affected Anderson the arts over and the course of Eleanor the course of Roosevelt American Marian Anderson, 1943 history. It also shows how,
when people
stand up for
what's right,
many others
rally around
them.
Anderson was not only able to give her
concert, but her audience
and message
was much bigger
because Roosevelt had stood up with her against racial discrimination.

6TH-8TH THE WHY...

Colorful At the time of Feast publication,
Colorful Feast

Farah
Lindsey-Almada was a teenager. This poem serves
as a lovely
model for students who will also explore the intersection of
food, culture,
and identity. In addition,
students will examine how Lindsey-
Almada brings
the textures,
smells, and
tastes of a meal to her readers with sensory
descriptions.

9TH-10TH THE WHY...

"See You By tracing the
On the author's name Other to a pivotal Side!" My moment in Family, 2 history, and Presidents, unpacking and the what that African moment and American Dream the decision to use the name American Dream across several generations in a family meant, the lesson explores a Black American conception of the American Dream. One family history can be illustrative of the long and complicated journey towards the realization of that dream.

11TH-12TH THE WHY...

The Maggie L. Walker Memorial Plaza This lesson is important because it acknowledges, examines, and celebrates the life of an often-overlooked figure in Black American history. It provides students with an opportunity to engage with the important work of Maggie Walker, whose efforts

positively
impacted the lives of people in her community at the turn of the twentieth century.
