Quarterly Position Report March 31, 2025

The uncertainty of widespread tariffs weighed on the markets in the latter half of the first quarter of 2025, pushing Treasury yields and equity prices lower. The five-year note led the decline, falling by 43 basis points (bps). The Dow Jones Industrial Average, S&P 500, and Nasdag-100 indexes declined -1.3%, -4.6%, and -10.4%, respectively. The first two job reports in 2025 fell below the average of 2024 as the unemployment rate ticked higher in February to 4.1%. Trade policy remains a primary focus of the markets, both in the US and globally. These concerns have led to a decline in consumer confidence, with the expectations index hitting a 12-year low in March. The Federal Reserve (Fed) kept policy on hold at the March 19 Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) meeting in a range of 4.25% to 4.50%. The median dot in the Summary of Economic Projections (SEM) fell to two (25 bps) rate cuts by the end of 2025.
