SUBJECT: Weber High School DECA, FBLA and Educators Rising

Alan Rawlins, Kyle Stanger, and Angie Larsen are Career and Technical Education (CTE) Business teachers at Weber High School. In recent years, these remarkable teachers have worked together to not only provide top-tier academic opportunities for students but it is what they have done beyond the school day that has made all the difference. They are advisors for DECA, FBLA and Educators Rising -- Student clubs/organizations in CTE. They have won numerous local and local awards and recognitions for the number of members of their clubs and groups. They have a unique ability to inspire, encourage, and elevate students and to support them in doing challenging things and have fun doing it. Their students have earned thousands in scholarships and the opportunities that Alan, Kyle, and Angie have facilitated for students have been life-altering and given students soft skills that help them in all of their post-secondary pursuits. This is a well-deserved recognition of three of the best educators not only in our district but in the state.
