Description: Unleash your inner architect and engineer with Engineering and Design with Cardboard! Cardboard has never been so captivating! This course is perfect for budding designers, builders, and problem-solvers who want to explore the intersection of form, function, and creativity. This engaging online STEM course challenges students to design and build architecturally-inspired cardboard furniture, clothing, and even animals. Guided by the steps of the engineering design process, they'll research styles, brainstorm ideas, prototype, and construct full-scale projects using only cardboard, basic tools and Chomp Saw, a child safe Power tool designed to work with cardboard. With limited materials and tools, students will cultivate their industrial design skills as they work within constraints to meet the functional, aesthetic, and economic benefit of their projects. Whether it's a towering hat, a moving vehicle, or an interactive game, the final cardboard creations allow students to showcase their innovative designs and bring their ideas to life.
