Read Aloud Handbook

The Number One Thing Parents Can Do . . .

Parents often ask, “How can I help my child learn to read? How can I help my child enjoy reading?” The answer to these questions can be both simple and daunting. Are you ready for the answer? The number one thing parents can do to help their children learn to read is to read to them. On one hand, this sounds simple. . .just pick up a book and read it with your child. On the other hand, more questions come to mind: when, where, how often, and with what books?

To the rescue comes the 8th edition of Jim Trelease’s Read-Aloud Handbook. This million copy bestseller is for any adult wanting to help children become lifelong readers. It is full of how-tos for reading to children of all ages, and it includes a Giant Treasury of Great Read-Aloud Books.

The Fort’s library now has The Read-Aloud Handbook available for parents to check out. If you would like to take advantage of this first-rate resource, simply ask your child to check it out for you. You may also come to The Fort and check it out in your child’s name. Once you have signed in at the office, see Brynn Graham in the library. She does have duties outside of the library, so it would be a good idea to call to confirm her availability (541-479-4440, ext. 2920).
