College Entrance Exam Participation and Performance: Class of 2012

In order to prepare Coppel ISD learners to be competitive among their global peers in the college admissions process and for them to have the academic foundation essential for postsecondary success, the district uses the results from college admissions assessments as one measure in determining the effectiveness of its programs in preparing students for postsecondary success.

The September 24, 2012 board information item includes statistics on the participation and performance of Coppel ISD learners, including the performance and participation of student groups in the district. As a measure of effectiveness, the report includes scores from comparative populations in the state, as well as national statistics. In addition to trends in overall performance, the performance of students on college-readiness indicators is addressed in the report.
