The charts above show the attendance for classes 7-12 from December 10, 2019 through January 10, 2020. These trends tend to replicate the previous months. The efforts to improve the rates have had little effect on the students and in some cases the parent's/ guardians attitudes towards regular attendance. A total of 55+ letters for junior high students with 8 or more absences have been processed in addition to daily calls from the home school coordinator and in some cases home visits. 94 letters were processed for 94 high school students with the same process of calls, letters home, home visits including contacts by some teachers.

The report is comprised of 10 violations of school policy or student conduct, 3 students were suspended while others received ISS, parent conferences, verbal warnings or went through restorative justice. In the instances where drugs and alcohol or involved the local law enforcement are contacted. The parents of the students that violated school policy were contacted and informed of the violation if verbal contact could not be made the home school coordinator delivered the write up. In many cases that involve home contact the phone numbers have been changed or disconnected. Letters that are returned as undeliverable often have to be hand delivered. As part of the intervention process I'm on breakfast and lunch duty, hall and bathroom duty including classroom observation to every class at least every hour, on a regular day I record an average of 6 walking miles. Being visible and available allows the staff and students more opportunities to report negative student behavior, possible confrontations or just to check on people.
