Setting the Why for the Partnership

Please describe the intended outcome(s) to be gained through the coaching and professional learning services. This statement must align to the original Statement of Interest form and may also include any refined or updated outcomes.

Alsea School District is engaging in a coaching and professional learning partnership to address chronic absenteeism by strengthening student engagement, belonging, and academic rigor. In the context of declining enrollment, regular attendance has become increasingly critical to both student success and the long-term stability of the district. While graduation rates remain strong, patterns of inconsistent attendance suggest a disconnect between course completion and students' daily experience of learning. District leaders believe that increases in rigor, relevance, and student ownership must be reflected not only in academic outcomes, but in how often students attend, how connected they feel to school, and whether they see themselves as capable, engaged learners.

This partnership will focus on developing collective leadership practices grounded in transparent, consensus-based decision-making and inclusive engagement. District leaders will intentionally involve students, families, staff, and community members, particularly voices that are not always represented, to align expectations for learning with Alsea's shared values and community identity. Instructional practices, school culture, and family engagement efforts will be examined and strengthened to ensure they work together to support student engagement and consistent attendance.

The intended outcomes include increased student-reported engagement and sense of belonging, improved regular attendance, reductions in chronic absenteeism, and leadership practices that consistently prioritize students experiencing opportunity gaps while maintaining high expectations for learning across the district.

Additional notes regarding coaching services:

Communication Planning

How will the coaching recipient (ESD, District, School) communicate the initial coaching plan with their staff? How can the coaching provider support this work?

The superintendent will introduce the coaching plan to building leaders during a leadership meeting and the board during monthly meetings, outlining the purpose of the work, priority focus areas, and expectations related to improving student engagement and attendance. Building leaders will then share the plan with staff through staff meetings and collaborative planning time, clearly identifying how the work will be implemented at both the schoolwide and classroom levels and how it connects to instructional rigor, student belonging, and attendance.

The coaching provider will support this process by partnering with district and building leaders to co-develop the coaching plan, clarify key messages, and identify practical strategies staff can implement. The coach will assist leaders in preparing for clear and consistent communication, supporting alignment across the district, and ensuring the plan is translated into actionable practices that support student engagement and regular attendance.

How will the coaching recipient (ESD, District, School) communicate progress with their staff? How can the coaching provider support this work?

Alsea School District will communicate progress on the coaching work through regular superintendent updates to building leaders, using leadership meetings to review attendance data, student engagement indicators, and implementation progress. Building leaders will share these updates with staff during staff meetings and collaborative team time, highlighting trends, celebrating progress, and identifying adjustments needed to strengthen outcomes. Additionally, the district will communicate out regularly to the school board.

The coaching provider will support this work by helping leaders identify meaningful indicators of progress, use data as a tool for reflection and improvement, and facilitate focused conversations about what is working and where additional support is needed. The coach will also support consistent messaging across the district, help leaders stay anchored to shared goals, and incorporate feedback from staff and students to refine practices and sustain momentum.

How will the coaching provider and coaching recipient engage in ongoing regular communications to plan, adjust and confirm the planned coaching activities?

The coaching provider and district leadership will engage in regularly scheduled check-ins to plan, review, and adjust coaching activities based on current data and emerging needs. These meetings will include the superintendent and will focus on progress toward goals related to attendance, engagement, and instructional rigor, upcoming coaching supports, and any necessary refinements to the plan.

Between meetings, the coaching provider will maintain communication through shared planning documents and written summaries that confirm decisions, next steps, and responsibilities. This approach ensures clarity and alignment while allowing the coaching work to remain responsive to district and school-level needs.

Who (names of people), besides ODE, will receive the coaching reports submitted by the coaching vendor to the coaching recipient:

Stacy Knudson.

Post Coaching Scaling & Sustaining

Please describe how the coaching recipient will build capacity to scale systems across their district (region) and sustain the coaching efforts.

Alsea School District will use the leadership practices and structures developed through this coaching partnership to build internal capacity and sustain improvement beyond the coaching period. District and building leaders will integrate shared tools, collaborative decision-making processes, and reflective leadership practices into routine work focused on reviewing attendance, student engagement, and instructional expectations. Over time, these practices will become embedded in regular leadership systems rather than dependent on external coaching support.

As leadership capacity strengthens, the district will apply the collaborative coaching framework to improve related systems, including instructional alignment, family engagement efforts, and student support structures. By embedding shared ownership, inclusive decision-making, and data-informed reflection into existing processes, Alsea School District will expand effective practices across schools and sustain long-term improvements in attendance, engagement, and student learning.
