The Clackamas Print:
A Year of Excellence

—

27 Awards | Student-Run | 2024–2025

Presented by Co-Editors-in-Chief, Evan Tichenor and Quinton Prudhomme

Why student journalism is important at CCC

- Builds real-world skills (writing, editing, photography, design, leadership)

- Fosters free speech and campus dialogue

- Gives students a professional voice and platform

Our Achievements This Year

1. 13 ONPA awards, recognized by KATU news

2. 14 PNAJE awards

3. Total of 10 first place prizes

Quinton Prudhomme:

Multi-first-place winning news photojournalist

Portland Police moved the line inside of the park blocks to cut off possible flank areas during the 2024 PSU riots. Shortly after, officer 508 was positioned in front of graffiti that said "the cops don't know what to do LMAO" with a depiction of a pig whose eyes were crossed out. Photo Quinton Prudhomme

Carlos Rodriguez-Picazo:

First-place winning sports photographer

A Fisherman at Meldrum Bar Park in Gladstone on Friday, April 26. Fisherman was casting into the Willamette River. Fisherman were out fishing on a nice/rainy spring day going after salmon on the Willamette River. Taken by Carlos Rodriguez-Picazo

Carlos Rodriguez-Picazo won an award for sports photography as well as a raffle for a $1,000 scholarship from the Oregon Newspapers Foundation.

Thank you: for your continued support of student media at Clackamas Community College. The awards we've received this year serve as a reflection of the high level of excellence our students are capable of achieving when given the opportunity to lead and create. Through their work with The Clackamas Print, students are not only producing high-quality journalism but also developing essential skills in critical thinking, communication, leadership, and teamwork —all of which prepare them for future academic and professional success. These accomplishments underscore the value and importance of maintaining strong support for student-led programs.

—Co-Editors-in-Chief, Quinton Prudhomme and Evan Tichenor

Questions?