SUBJECT: FY22 Schedule Survey

This past year, the Utah State School Board and the Utah Legislature allowed school districts to propose a flexible schedule to accommodate the many demands placed upon educators as a result of the pandemic. Recently, the Utah State School Board amended the policy which required 990 hours of face-to-face instruction for the 2021-22 school year. This amendment provides some flexibility for school districts regarding traditional times in school. With that in mind, the Weber Board of Education sought feedback, via a brief email survey, from teachers, employees and parents regarding the possibility of continuing a modified pilot schedule for 2021-2022. This schedule could be used to support teacher professional learning and the personalization of learning experiences for individual students.

I will give a brief review of the survey results to provide the Board with the information necessary to make an informed decision regarding a potential pilot schedule adjustment for 2021-2022.
