April Teacher Tip by Nora Eller, MLC Teacher

April begins the fourth quarter, and while the school year may be close to ending, our work helping our students learn to love reading never ends. Summer provides the perfect opportunity to invest in our children's reading-and maybe even our own! Local libraries and many bookstores, including Barnes & Noble, typically have a summer reading program to encourage kids to read. These programs allow children of all ages the opportunity to select new books, compete for prizes, and sometimes even participate in crafts or activities. No program available near you? You can create your very own! Check out this blog for inspiration.

Don't forget the importance of reading aloud! We often focus on reading to our children when they are small and just learning to read, but it can be just as important (and engaging) to read to our children as they get older too. Take turns having them read to you, include older siblings or grandparents, pick a family book to read together, or even host FaceTime reading parties with those far away.

Not sure where to start? Find a book! Picture books are great for sparking the imagination of little ones. Interactive books are also great for beginners. Older kids may enjoy traditional novels, chapter books, magazines, or graphic novels. Looking for specific books based on your child's reading level? Reach out to your contact teacher or local librarian for help. Regardless of age, reading is an essential life skill that once fostered, opens endless possibilities for us all. Happy reading!

Pictures from the KLC's Wearable Art Activity

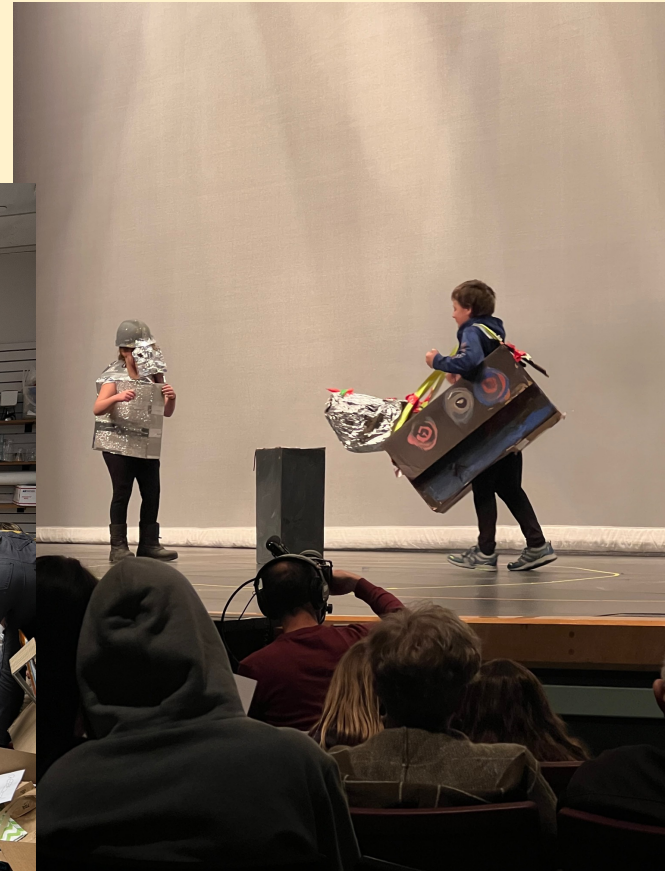

This activity was held in January and February to make the art.

It ended in March with an on stage event to show off everyone's hard work! Great job kids!!

So much fun!

Nice job!
