Riverside County Community Listening & Learning Session

---

IECC engaged roughly 42 parents and caregivers raising young children in Riverside County. This included about 35 participants from the community of Mecca and about 7 participants from the community of Jurupa Valley. While Mecca provided the larger sample of voices, feedback from both communities offers a valuable look at shared conditions across the county along with location specific needs and strengths.

Shared Themes

Across Mecca and Jurupa Valley, families described several consistent concerns that shape daily life and impact the wellbeing of young children including:

- Limited access to services
- Strain on family stability due to structural conditions
- Need for early childhood supports

Mecca Analysis

---

Feedback from Mecca reflected the deepest structural challenges among the two communities.

- Threats of Deportation and Family Separation
- Infrastructure and capacity limitations
- Environmental and economic pressures

Mecca Testimony

In Mecca, the severity of not having timely access to care resulted in many children and youth to live with ongoing conditions for long periods of time without proper medical or specialized attention.

Many families live with constant anxiety due to frequent ICE activity and the threat of deportation. With a high concentration of immigrant farmworker families, parents are often afraid to do everyday tasks like going to the grocery store or picking up their children from school. This fear has created a sense of isolation and uncertainty, making it difficult for families to feel safe in their own community.

- "My daughter broke her arm. We took her to the doctor, and the doctor told us we had to make an appointment with a pediatrician. It took them a week to give us an appointment with the pediatrician, and meanwhile, my daughter spent a week with a broken arm [without medical attention]."
- "If we had a hospital, we wouldn't have to go all the way to Indio to take a child who gets sick at midnight."
- "Doctor appointments are difficult to get quickly. Sometimes you wait a month to see a doctor."
- Some children with undocumented or mixed-status parents reported experiences of bullying at school, which contributed to heightened stress and negatively impacted their mental health.

Jurupa Valley Barriers

Jurupa Valley participants offered a more mixed picture, identifying both challenges and notable strengths present in the community.

- Limited access to child care
- Limited access to culturally competent healthcare including developmental pediatric care
- Infrastructure growth with gaps in homeless support

Jurupa Valley Assets

Community Assets:

- Strong sense of community
- Responsive Community Resources
- Quality Child Care Services
- Proximity to Healthcare Services
- Access to youth programs

Systemic Problems

The severity and root causes differ. Mecca concerns were shaped by geographic isolation, underinvestment, and structural inequities. Jurupa Valley concerns did not focus on distance or basic infrastructure and instead emphasized quality, cultural relevance, and system coordination.
