Grandparent's Day – The Kindergarten teachers and students honored grandparents by celebrating Grandparents day singing songs and performing for their special family members. The program was followed with a lasagna lunch for the students and grandparents together. After lunch, grandparents were welcomed into the Kindergarten classroom where grandparents received a special gift made by the students.

Parent Luncheon

Taher food service provided an opportunity for parents to join their children for lunch the last week of November. We've never had such full cafeteria! Each day of the week two grade levels of parents joined their child(ren) for lunch. What a joyous event! Students feel supported in their education endeavors when parents show support at school, even if it over a lunch.

Tom Turkey's Thanksgiving – Fourth graders in Mrs. Moe's class strengthened their speaking skills by performing a play for their classmates in honor of Thanksgiving. While each of the animals tried to help save Tom Turkey from the inevitable dinner he was sure to become, Tom Turkey was finding it hopeless until when Thanksgiving day finally arrived, Tom Turkey was invited to join the farmer for dinner rather than to be dinner. Such fun to watch. Speaking and Listening are some of the Common Core State Standards we address in our English Language Arts Standards in the elementary.

Hatchet Pride – Elementary students are learning what it means to show Hatchet Pride. Our PBIS focus area this month is showing Hatchet Pride. This term is new to elementary students this year. Classrooms spent time discussing what this means to them and how they can show their Hatchet Pride. This was followed up with High School students presenting "Hatchet Pride" to the elementary students. To follow this up, the PBIS showcase holds slips listing opportunities for students to choose to complete to show their Hatchet Pride. The students pictured here chose, give a compliment to someone. They hurried to the office to let me know they appreciated my leadership as their principal.
