4. Consolidation of Funds

Rather than identify specific dollar amounts to each site and to specific children, the district pools the money to provide services to the district in an equitable way. When funds are broken out and targeted to specific schools it makes it difficult to afford things such as professional development. Pooling funds helps make larger purchases possible when districts have small schools.

Consolidate of the Title I-C Migrant funding: Rather than identify specific dollar amounts to specific children, the district pools the money to provide services to the group of migrant students in an equitable way. When funds are broken out and targeted to specific students it makes it difficult to afford things such as camps, wages for tutoring, etc. Pooling funds helps make larger purchases possible when districts have small schools or few migrant students.
