5206E Student Discipline - Removal from Class, Subject, or Activity by Teacher

A teacher may remove a student from any class, subject, or activity for up to one full school day, per instance, if the teacher has good reason to believe that the student:

- A. intentionally disrupted the class, subject, or activity;
- B. jeopardized the health or safety of any of the other participants in the class, subject, or activity; or
- C. was insubordinate during the class, subject, or activity.

Any teacher who removes a student from a class, subject, or activity must immediately report the removal and its reason to the building principal or designee. If a student is removed from a class, subject, or activity, but will otherwise remain at school, the building principal or designee must ensure that the student is appropriately supervised during the removal and, if the student is a student with a disability, that all procedures applicable to students with disabilities are followed.

Any teacher who removes a student from a class, subject, or activity must, as soon as possible following the removal, request that the student's Parent attend a Parent-teacher conference to discuss the removal. The building principal or designee must attend the conference if either the teacher or the Parent requests the building principal's attendance. The building principal or designee must make reasonable efforts to invite a school counselor, school psychologist, or school social worker to attend the conference.
