

General Education Board Report

August 2025

This summer has been a season of growth, renewal, and preparation for the Instructional Leaders team. We took the time to rejuvenate, reflect, and dive into new learning opportunities that will inform and strengthen our work in the upcoming school year. Whether through professional readings, workshops, or collaborative planning sessions, our focus remained on staying current with best practices and innovative approaches to teaching and learning.

A major part of our summer has been devoted to preparing high-quality professional development sessions for the local districts. With the return of teachers just around the corner, we've been hard at work designing meaningful, relevant training that will support educators as they welcome students back into their classrooms. These sessions are crafted to not only meet instructional needs but also to inspire and energize staff for the year ahead.

We were also fortunate to meet and engage with some of the new teachers joining our county. Welcoming fresh faces into our educational community is always a highlight, and we are excited to collaborate with and support them as they begin their journey. As the new school year launches, we look forward to working side by side with all our educators, continuing to foster excellence in teaching and learning across the county.
