Investing in Rural Prosperity

The Association of Illinois Rural and Small Schools would like to share with you a report titled Investing in Rural Prosperity. This report, published by the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis in collaboration with the Federal Reserve Board of Governors, seeks to help rural individuals and communities achieve shared economic prosperity.

Rural communities throughout the United States are vibrant places with great people, rich culture and heritage, and deep social ties. But many rural communities have been buffeted by the increasing prominence of automation and the knowledge-based economy, along with long-term challenges arising from lower educational levels, remoteness, and other factors. As a result, many communities are at a crossroads, wondering which direction will lead to prosperity for all.

Investing in Rural Prosperity seeks to help people living in rural areas navigate the challenges and opportunities they face to achieve a prosperous future. Click the button below to learn more.
