Happy Mother's Day!!!

In 1908 Anna Jarvis worked to push forward a holiday that honored mom's. She did so to honor the hard work and dedication of her own mother to their family. Then in 1914 President Wilson signed a resolution recognizing the second Sunday in May as a National Day to recognize mom's known as Mother's Day.

Many of us are moms, aunts, step-moms, foster mom's, adopted mom's, grandmothers, or we even step in as a surrogate mom from time to time. No matter your official title, I hope that you have a very blessed Mother's Day and spend it with those you love. Thank you for all you do for your children and even for children you claim as your own. A mother's love is hard to mimic or replace.

A note from your principal

It is so hard to believe that we only have NINE school days left with the students. This year has flown by. Before things get too hectic I wanted to take a minute to say thank you.

This was my first year as principal and I have learned so much from so many different people. I feel like I've grown so much not only as an administrator but as a human. Here are some of the things that I've learned this year.

- Kindness is always the best way to handle situations.
- Our kids always come first.
- Opportunities for growth are always there, we just have to look.
- Listening more and talking less is the best form of leadership.
- Stepping up when others can't is the best form of support.
- Sometimes the work is hard, and then it gets even harder. But, it's totally worth it.
- We only have our students for a short time. Love them hard and teach them well.
- If you are looking at education as a job, you are going to be miserable. Education is a calling.
- We are so blessed to be here and cross each other's paths at this point in time.
- The kids will always remember how you made them feel.
- Sometimes the adults need you more than the kids do.
- We all need to take better care of ourselves.

- Life is like a part fun you had.
