8/20/2025 16:49:43	When you send out notices or information or directives, they should be written as if the person is just hearing about the subject for the first time. For example today I got an e mail about sports and for how to register for “big hitter” or something? What is that? Why would I need help registering for that? Is that required for sports? It just makes for more confusion. I don’t know if I need to know that information because I don’t know what it’s for.
