Trade, Tariffs and Turkey - Oh My!

Trade and its implications have dominated the news and the markets' focus this month. While the first quarter changes in tax policy have been universally hailed as a tailwind resulting in more robust household spending and business investment, trade policy was noted by Fed Chairman Powell as having potentially "significant negative effects" to domestic growth. This is particularly troubling amid an anticipated slowing pace of growth. Because of its impact, domestically the FOMC appears to be widening the pathway of uncertainty on policy rate hikes.

"For the second half of the year, [the FOMC] generally expected that GDP growth would likely slow from its second-quarter rate but would still exceed that of potential output." [FOMC Minutes]

The month-end trade news is upbeat however. Mexico and the US have settled on a NAFTA preliminary rewrite. Mexico was anxious to complete the transaction before the new President takes office. The peso rallied on the news against a dollar that is battering other currencies. This news could be seen as a step towards more deals/compromises as the US moves to matters of trade with Canada, then Europe and finally on to China.

After the 1Q, the markets have generally ignored the daily trade kerfuffle but Turkey's currency collapse created significant turmoil globally hinting at hidden fears. The volatility created was extreme and has begun to stabilize but not the rout in Turkish assets and debt. Investors feared contagion from Turkey's financial crisis would spread to other emerging markets. Italian and Spanish bank stocks fell precipitously and stand precariously. Like many emerging markets, 50% of Turkey's debt is denominated in USD. The Turkish 10-year remains 2% higher on the risk. This same situation could easily spread to other emerging markets.

The US dollar's strength is built on our economic strength and our attractive rates. It challenges our exporters but even more directly challenges other currencies. China has been actively supporting its yuan by central bank positioning like lessening reserve rates but the yuan remains down 5.3% on the year. This may influence its willingness to compromise on trade and tariffs.

Domestically Strong but Moderating

The trade situation and its uncertainty has definitely driven global funds on a flight to quality in Treasuries, however, there is a major divergence in the outlook between US equities and bonds. The stocks have hit all-time highs and continue to soar on strong earnings, tax cuts and economic growth. This month marked the start of the longest running bull market in stocks on record. Bonds on the other hand are range bound.

The view of the equities on the economy are based on a continuing growth, but the strength shown in 1Q has definitely moderated. It's not weak – just not strong. Even if the second half of 2018 has GDP reduced to 3% (from the latest 4.1%), it is still the best GDP since 2005 however.

Housing is the weakest sector of the economy and its has such a broad ripple effect it must be watched closely. Housing starts are down based on rising mortgage rates, home prices and a low inventory of homes. The raw material and worker costs for builders are up and reflected in the prices.

The consumer isn't slowing nonetheless. Retail sales have bounced above expectations up 6.4% YOY on apparel and food. She has also ramped up on cars and restaurant visits. This spending and confidence should continue with jobs and increased wages. A rebound in confidence has taken us to a 17-year high! Fortunately the consumer is also saving more. Savings have grown 6.7% (from 4.2%). Too continue these trends we need job growth and wage pressure, which is not currently in the picture. Expected slowdowns in manufacturing have not appeared, which could impact jobs.

At the Jackson Hole Economic Forum, Fed Chair Powell had confidence too and didn't point to a slowing economy but clearly the Committee is moving to a more "gradual" rate increase playbook, which will remain domestically data dependent.

The Flattening Curve

- Fears of an inverted curve remain. The multiyear flattening trend began as the Fed started to raise short-term rates in its pursuit of normalized monetary policy. Historically, when the yield curve has been flattening, it has often been an indicator of a weakening economy and in many cases portended an impending recession.
- This flattening however may not be foreshadowing a near-term recession risk, as it is being heavily influenced by global central bank actions and economic activity hasn't shown any indication of slowing.
- Other countries are keeping rates low – and bringing investors to the US. The ECB has held its short-term deposit rate at negative 0.40% for several years and will probably hold it there through the summer of 2019.
- Even though the 10-year U.S. Treasury is yielding only 2.82%, that yield appears quite attractive compared to Germany's 10-year bond at 0.34%. Until their rates increase and inflation kicks in demonstrably the shape is unlikely to change.

Your Portfolio

As of August 31, 2018

- P&A constantly reviews your portfolio for optimal asset allocation and a controlled average maturity because a diversified portfolio can better adjust to volatile market conditions.
- The graphs below show asset allocations by market sector and by maturity. They do reflect our anticipation of another rate increase in September – and perhaps one in December – which keeps the portfolios slightly shorter overall.
- The non-cash portion of your portfolio is yielding 2.30%.
