Our mid-year individual progress reports were sent home at the end of January. Teachers have been conferencing with students and parents about successes during the first half of the year and creating plans for a successful second half. Struggling students are receiving extra support in the form of one on one contact time with teachers.

Letters were also sent home to students who are not making satisfactory academic progress. These are students who have not completed enough work to earn any credit this year. These students will be monitored weekly and conferences will be scheduled with the principal and teacher to address school concerns and student needs.

Our school has a new parent coordinator. She is new to our school and wanted a way to be able to support the teachers and students. She and her husband have coined the name Parents That Care for the group. Her first task was starting a Box Tops for Education account for our school, and she is currently coordinating the collection of Box Tops. She hopes to be able to do more fundraisers throughout the school year. We are happy to have a dedicated volunteer.

Respectfully Submitted,
