To whom it may concern,

I am happy to present this cover letter to you for consideration as a teacher in the Cameron School District. I am soon finishing up my second year teaching for the Lac Courte Oreilles Ojibwe School District. My experiences on the Native Reservation have lead me to gain a better insight as to how to teach students with special needs, cultural backgrounds, limited English, and limited family income. If you are looking for someone with a natural drive, passion for teaching, and experience instilling confidence in diverse learners –one with an exceptionally broad range of skills and preparation- then you should consider me for your fall teaching positions.

My understanding of students has come from the many opportunities that I have been given to work with each individual learner. These opportunities have shaped the professional I have become and impact how I view the importance of education. In numerous occasions I have taught diverse groups of students, including those with learning disabilities, those who perform at and below their grade level, and those who are gifted. Through this I have become proficient in designing creative, hands-on lessons that stimulate each student's individual style of learning.

My greatest strengths are helping students grow into responsible and successful individuals. Building a classroom community in which each student feels safe and accepted where they can reach their full potential. I also believe that taking the time to get to know each student as an individual allows me to tailor my teaching to meet their needs, recognize their strengths and learning styles.

I look forward with great anticipation to discussing with you the many ways in which I can make a significant contribution to your education program. Thank you in advance for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Ashley Johnson
