Attendance and Accountability	Daily Logs/Journals <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. What did you do?2. What did you learn? Every Wednesday teachers submit a list of students to Mrs. Barker that are non-responsive, haven't checked in during the week, or are in jeopardy of failing. <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Mrs. Barker sends alerts out via PowerSchool that day.2. On Thursday, Mrs. Barker and Mrs. Haney call each parent on the list.
Teacher Challenges and Victories	Teachers are being stretched pretty thin. Some are working from 8:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. Successes have already been forwarded. Teachers are jacked about the graduation in the drive-in.
Student Challenges and Victories	The gap between at-risk students and those that are not at risk is getting wider by the day. When we return, we desperately need to work on building resilience in our students. This resilience is more important than learning the Pythagorean Theorem. Students that have resilience via internally or via external supports are doing good things and learning is definitely taking place.
