

Blackfeet Language – Native American Studies
Board report Dec. 2019

The decade ends and we still have much to look forward to. I have spent the last few weeks conjuring up ideas for a 'grammar' book. The attachments are the first steps in creating a grammar book that doesn't take the time to describe linguistic jargon or syntactic theories. They are documents that offer a key and strait Blackfoot language. They are based on methods I have encountered in the past and it is m attempt to mimic oral language and the recursive nature of languages into writing format. Just to emphasis, a part I think is essential is these documents value niitsii•pó'•"sin and most of the English is translated from Blackfoot by the person using the documents (students and teachers). I have confidence that any member of the board can complete the documents, I recommend to name document, for it is the most simplified. Note that these are first drafts and errors will most likely occur but with rounds of editing they will be perfections.
