Kind of, I do not know how to adult. I feel like we need to learn how to do taxes, apply for housing, and everything else. Otherwise I think I somewhat am.

No, I don't know what I'm doing now and I probably don't know what I will do.

For the most part, yes

Yes, I want got into the medical field and maybe become a general practitioner but I am indecisive right now.

Yes, a little. Somewhat. I haven't gotten the chance to go out there and ask for help or guidance.

No, the pressure and anxiety is getting to me; how I first felt when I transitioned from middle school to high school.

I don't feel prepared for what I want to do after high school. Most of the reason why I don't feel prepared for college is my fault. I have been getting more and more lazy and having less motivation to do my school work.

I feel prepared for going to college. The classes I've taken at BHS have helped me become a well rounded individual.

Kind of

There are specific classes that are put in place to help us feel prepared. I do feel semi-prepared because of what my older siblings have told me. I feel that academically we are ready to go and we can understand how difficult the next level can be. But I myself, have been taught at home and at school, in some classes, about what the real world can be and what comes with it. But there are some students in school who I feel, do not have the same resources at home and can often miss out of what other students would call, "Common Sense." But for myself, I feel prepared. Because these last few years there are teachers who really show us how college works. And I think its getting better.

No, because I've never been to college.

Not really, I feel that I should've been taught more about the adult world.

No.

yes and no. Some things i feel like i know, and the things that i do not know will just come to me when it finds its way. Just saying though, Mr.Ogden taught me more about being an adult and the responsibilities (not all but some very important ones) i will face then i learned from Mr.Bowers 6 100 point assignments, 6 250 point assignments and 2 500 point assignments.

I feel prepared for what I want to do, but it's not because of school, it's not really school related. I plan to continue to focus on cosmetology and working. There's nothing really that I want to do other than those two.

I do not feel fully prepared to go into the Air Force becuaese I have yet to learn about the basic knowledge of mechanics, and I am not on the track to Graduate High School with only one month left.

yes, every since junior been go to collage

yes, every one is go to the collage

What advice would you give students who are coming into high school?

Do not procrastinate and do not skip classes as a freshman and sophomore.

Do your work, even if you don't want to, even when you feel you are the laziest person in the world. Just get your shit done and you'll do amazing. Be you, don't let anyone stop your dreams, prove them wrong. Become who you want to be. Love yourself because when everybody leaves, you are still stuck with you. Depression sucks and you are going to come across it, go through it, don't listen to the dark thoughts, but learn from them. You're going to feel broken but boy does it feel good to pick yourself back up. Life gets better, live it.

It is easier to stay caught up and attend class than to not go and let your work stack up. Don't lose your motivation in school and keep pushing for your end goal. Breakfast and sleep is more important than you think. Your teachers are there to help you.

Always stay on top of your school work or else you are going to regret it. this has been overlooked by students coming from middle school and they think that its okay and its fine to have some late work but they don't know until it happens and they are failing because they can't keep up with the piled up work. so yea, I would say to keep up with homework and manage their time better.

I would advise them to do their work and just stay caught up and not give up.

Stay on top of your grades as best as you can, and make the most of your time, it will pass you by quickly!

Don't procrastinate any of your work. Don't stress too much, it'll only bring yourself down.

I would tell students coming to high school to make sure to do their work and not fall behind. It can be so easy to slack off but if you stay on track and do the best you can, you will be successful.

Be ready and do all your work and stay on top of it to graduate.

Take it seriously from the very beginning. Starting freshmen year. You got this.

Apply for scholarships ASAP and do your homework lol

Listen and pay attention because it will help in the end.

Don't skip classes, and take them seriously.

Be careful for what class you take your senior year. Do not take personal finance here.

The advice I would give to the students coming to high school is that they should all pay attention and not slack off and get unmotivated because it will really weigh down your grades. The grading system here is crazy. Just focus in class to what the teacher has to say and turn your stuff in on time with as much effort as you can do achieve the higher grade and you'll be fine.

Do not slack off during your Freshman year, this is the most important year of all because it will shape the way the rest of High School goes for you. Just make it easy for yourself and focus on school.

study hard go to class and have goals

study hard and go to the class
