

BP 1245 Parent Involvement – Title I Programs

Note: The No Child Left Behind Act of 2001 continues the federal requirement that districts receiving Title I funds have a policy on parental involvement. Minor changes to this requirement were implemented with NCLB. Districts are no longer required to assist parents in understanding the national education goals. On the other hand, districts may now establish a district wide parent advisory council to provide advice on all matters related to parent involvement in Title I programs. Districts must provide full opportunities for the participation of parents of migratory students, to the extent practicable. General requirements continuing from previous years include the mandate that districts conduct, with parental input, an annual evaluation of the content and effectiveness of the parent involvement policy. Additionally, each of the district's schools with a Title I program must have its own parental involvement policy created with input from parents of students attending that school. Finally, parents must be notified of the parent involvement policy.

This policy and accompanying regulation meets the requirements of No Child Left Behind, except that it was not created with input from parents in your district. Each Board and individual school site should obtain parental input prior to adoption of this language, as required by NCLB.

The Board believes that parents are their children's first and most influential teachers and that continued parental involvement in the education of children contributes greatly to individual student achievement and conduct. Direct parental involvement also contributes to the rich cultural and linguistic diversity of local school communities. As a result, parents must have a substantial and meaningful opportunity to participate in the education of their children.

School employees should communicate frequently with a child's parent(s) and provide activities that will educate parents regarding the intellectual and developmental needs of their children at all age levels. This can be accomplished by cooperation between the school and school/community groups, ie; Advisory School Councils, etc. to furnish learning opportunities and to disseminate information to parents regarding parental involvement, parenting skills, and child/adolescent development. Administrators and teachers should keep parents well informed about school expectations and how parents can assist their children in support of classroom learning activities. Parental involvement in the activities of the schools is encouraged.

The Superintendent should ensure that each school develops, with parental input, an individual school parent involvement policy. This policy should outline how parents, the school staff, and students will share the responsibilities for improved student academic achievement.

The District will seek the input of parents in conducting an annual evaluation of the content and effectiveness of this policy. The Site Administrator will do the same for the local school policy. The annual review should determine what action needs to be taken, if any, to increase parental participation.
