4. INFORMATION

A. Superintendent's Report

For the Superintendent's PowerPoint see Exhibit 1.

Superintendent Jaeger began his report by recapping the legislative session. He said this lengthy session is anticipated to end around July 31 when the session resumes. The session included 1,671 bills and 109 memorials and resolutions that were introduced. 346 bills were sent to Governor Hobbs, and she signed 202 of those bills into law and vetoed 143 -- a 41% veto rate. Superintendent Jaeger explained the high veto rate is due to several factors, including the fact that we have politically split branches of government and a third of the Legislature were brand new to their positions. Additionally, the Republicans passed several bills dealing with politically charged issues such as elections, transgender issues, and critical race theory which led to a number of vetoes.

Superintendent Jaeger talked about the budget process. In February, a Republican budget was approved, and it passed both houses on party lines. This first budget did not include any spending of the state's $2+ billion surplus and was vetoed by Governor Hobbs.

After that first budget veto, the legislative leadership began meeting to develop a bipartisan budget. The result was that the Republican leadership divided up the $2+ billion surplus -- taking half for themselves and giving the other half to Governor Hobbs and the Democratic caucus to determine spending priorities. The Republican leadership then divvied up the funds by giving each member a pot of cash to determine how they would like to spend it, with the warning that it could not be used for divisive or controversial items that would be complete dealbreakers for the other side of the aisle. In the end, this novel approach was successful.

Superintendent Jaeger reported that in May, a $17.8 billion budget package passed both chambers. He noted that most of the negotiations were between Governor Hobbs and the Republican leadership, but a portion of the Democratic caucus were supportive of the package due to some investments in education, healthcare, and housing. However, Democratic leadership criticized the Governor for failing to involve the Democratic caucus earlier in the process, as well as a lack of transparency and a final outcome which they felt fell far short of their key priorities, including accountability measures on the growing ESA program.

He talked about a rule change that took place during the session. The new rule is the “majority of the majority” rule. This change means that:

- Any bill that went to the House or Senate floor had to have a majority of the Republican caucus in support or it would not move forward in the opposite chamber. This caused some issues:
 - Some members had to reconsider a bill that had enough votes to pass but didn’t get a majority of the majority.
 - Democratic members were asked to prove they had a vote count of 16 Republicans before the Republican leadership would even put the bill on the docket for a vote.
 - This caused Democrats to boycott and vote no on every bill that went on the docket, leaving dozens of bills passing with only Republican support.

Superintendent Jaeger talked about the Aggregate Expenditure Limit (AEL), which was created nearly 40 years ago to control spending by Arizona school districts. The cap restricts the amount of money that schools can spend on operational and capital expenses, including salaries, facilities, and technology upgrades. He explained that education has changed significantly, with the creation of special education, vocational technical training, and the school choice movement the cap has been very limiting. This year, an agreement was made to override the AEL and allow schools the certainty that the dollars appropriated for fiscal year 2024, could be used and therefore, avoid another emergency during the 2024 legislative session. He stated that there are discussions to permanently eliminate the aggregate expenditure limit or to update the limit to reflect the current educational landscape. Superintendent Jaeger noted that voters will need to decide if a change to the state constitution is needed.

He gave a summary of the budget, which includes $300 million of one-time K-12 State Aid Supplement, $88.6 million to new ongoing K-12 funding, $341.9 million for school facilities, $15 million for dual enrollment student incentives. He explained that the actual amount is based on student enrollment and has not yet been determined.

Superintendent Jaeger then shared some photos of summer activities and events. He said summer remains a busy time for students and staff.

He reported that Future Dorados who are moving from middle school to high school got the chance to meet one another last month and learn a bit about what their futures at Canyon del Oro High School will look like. There were many games and activities at the event.

He thanked the Dorado staff and students who helped bring the incoming freshman together.

Superintendent Jaeger said in accordance with the District's continued commitment to offering training opportunities that have a direct impact on student learning, 120 Amphitheater educators attended an AVID Summer Institute to learn research based instructional strategies that support students. He commented that these best practices increase college and career readiness and help ensure students' academic success and future preparedness. He commented that the event was a great opportunity for collaboration and to learn about training strategies.

He shared some highlights from the final weeks of summer school. He reported that students at Amphi Middle School had the opportunity to build some amazing benches in their summer wood shop session. Prince Elementary School students had a "camp out" complete with many camping activities, such as building tents and engineering solar ovens which they used to make s'mores.

Superintendent Jaeger said that students at Imagine Preschool at Painted Sky Elementary School recently enjoyed a water fun day, which was a great way to spend time outside on a (very) hot summer day. He commented that Amphi is proud to offer summer programs for the earliest learners at many sites.

He talked about upcoming events and trainings including Infinite Campus, new leader orientation and training (for new district administrators), training for first- and second-year principals, the annual Effective Teacher Conference, the All-Admin Back-to-School Retreat and a school supply drive with KVOA. Superintendent Jaeger said the first day of school for students is August 3rd.
