■ Good new first – We have two waddlers who are attending speech therapy classes online. They go on zoom every other Tuesday. The course is offered through Mile Stone. We also have a young lady who works in our district coming over to get acquainted with one of the toddlers. When the child is comfortable enough with the situation they will also be assessed for speech. If needed they will also be getting therapy The zoom ladies were impressed with our two babies. Both have difficulties with vocabulary, but each one can sign please, more, all done and thank you. I am so happy that these services are available for our students.

Easter seemed to be rushed. We tried to fit as much in as possible. The kids and staff were taking turns being out. Spring has our immune systems down and a viral infection is going around. They did get to do some easter activities such as coloring and painting. They had an easter egg hunt and had to find their baskets. Thanks to Toni Tatsey they even got to go over to see the Easter bunny.

Bad news is buffalo aka friends (nits) were discovered in the hair of a few of them. The girls started a line to check each one. A few were sent home. We followed protocol and they got to return after treatment and 24 hours. The older ones now know that “we can not share hair products, hats or bedding. One little girl wanted to check my head for “bugs”.

The custodians came in and bombed the child care and the girls did a deep clean.

We are still waiting for the bathroom sink to come in so that construction may resume and concluded.
