School Board Governance and Equity Initiative

The Corvallis School District was selected for a year-long pilot project, sponsored by Chalkboard Project, in collaboration with the Center for Reform of School Systems (CRSS) and the Medford School District. The collaboration is focused on improving student achievement by using the levers of good governance and equity.

Chalkboard Project is an initiative of Foundations for a Better Oregon – six independent, nonpartisan Oregon foundations united by a common purpose: a better state for all Oregonians. Chalkboard Project's goal is elevating student achievement, eradicating achievement inequalities, and making Oregon K-12 public schools among the best in the nation. The Center for Reform of School Systems (CRSS) has a 15-year track record of delivering effective school district governance training across the country.

Board Training Prioritized

The Corvallis School Board adopted Policy JBB – Educational Equity on September 12, 2016. This policy has become a cornerstone of the work of the board and superintendent. Two examples of our commitment to this work include the board's action to affirm the rights of undocumented students through a board resolution on December 5, 2016, and the task force I convened last spring to review school fundraising practices as they relate to equity.

Four of our seven board members have participated in the Beyond Diversity training facilitated by Pacific Educational Group. This training provides a framework for our district as we analyze our organizational practices with students, staff and families. I am looking forward to working with the board on the additional governance and equity training made available through the Chalkboard Project.

The first training will be held in Roseburg, Oregon, October 27 and 28, 2017. Additional training and collaboration sessions will be scheduled throughout the year. The district received a grant from Chalkboard Project to be used for travel costs.

School Board Governance and Equity Initiative

Every community deserves a great school district

Research shows highly effective school boards have a significant effect on raising student outcomes and success. To be effective agents for change, board members must better know and understand the key elements of school board governance. Yet, many school boards face these four common challenges:

1. New board members receive little to no training around governance and the levers impacting student success.
2. Superintendents and board members lack clarity on roles and responsibilities.
3. School board representation doesn't reflect the student population it serves.
4. Equity is not at the forefront of board practices and policies.

Oregon is one of 24 states that does not require any training for school board members at the time of election or on an annual basis. As a result, many board members enter into board service with a limited understanding of board duties. They often lack the skills and knowledge to properly align governance and management, and lose sight of their important policy leadership responsibilities.

School Board Governance and Equity Initiative

Preparing school board members to become effective leaders

School board members and superintendents have shared responsibility to create high-performing schools. The challenges they face in today's educational environment are immense: prepare all students for success during their school years and beyond, especially those from historically underserved communities. This requires adept leaders, innovative designs, supportive teamwork, and bold leadership.

Chalkboard Project's pilot seeks to test evidence-based practices that help build and sustain highly effective boards. The pilot aims to help school boards:

1. Receive training around governance and leadership to leverage their impact on student success.
2. Implement equitable practices and policies to better impact the success of students of color.
3. Increase the diversity of school board members.

Participating district leaders and school board members co-design a customized model and framework for effective board governance with guidance from expert governance trainers and an equity coach. Working side by side, participants receive coaching and consulting during the year-long pilot as they learn to use multiple data measures for decision making, establish a clear vision and strategic focus, transform their districts into high-performing systems, and seek deep transformation to meet the needs of the children and communities they serve.

Currently, two school districts—Corvallis and Medford—are participating in the pilot. With nearly 10 districts waiting to engage in this effort, demand is high. Chalkboard intends to roll out the pilot to more districts in 2018 pending additional private/philanthropic funding.
